Cuts to regional offices could impact Head Start programs serving over 12,000 New Jersey families, according to Bonnie Eggenburg, president of the New Jersey Head Start Association.

Head Start programs in New Jersey are continuing to offer child care and early education after the Trump administration closed the regional office that serves New Jersey.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services closed five Head Start regional offices in New York, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and Seattle, according to the National Head Start Association. New Jersey providers said they rely on their regional office for support, so the closure of the regional office in New York has led to stress and uncertainty.

"It is stressful because any time there is change without a lot of communication it leaves a lot of unknowns," said Bonnie Eggenburg, president of the New Jersey Head Start Association. Viewed at the N.J. / N.Y. border

Head Start, a federal program founded in 1965 as part of the Johnson administration, promotes school readiness for children from low-income families from birth to age 5 and support for the whole family, not just the child who is enrolled. As of August 2024, Head Start programs in New Jersey were serving more than 12,000 families, according to Eggenburg.

The recent closures are part of a larger plan to "Make America Healthy Again" based on recommendations from the administration's government efficiency task force, which is led by Trump ally and billionaire Elon Musk. The task force claims it will save taxpayers $1.8 billion per year by laying off about 10,000 full-time employees in the Department of Health and Human Services. The department had run 10 regional offices before the cuts.

"We aren't just reducing bureaucratic sprawl. We are realigning the organization with its core mission and our new priorities in reversing the chronic disease epidemic," Health Secretary Robert F. Kennedy, Jr. said in a statement. "This Department will do more — a lot more — at a lower cost to the taxpayer."

New Jersey is part of Head Start Region 2, which also serves New York, Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands. The closest Head Start office that remains open is in Philadelphia, which handles Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

No warning

Eggenburg said programs in New Jersey have not received notice about being transferred to another region. Services are continuing as normal, but she is concerned the one or two programs that are expected to receive additional federal funding at the end of the month could be impacted by the office closure and layoffs.

Eggenburg, who is also the vice president of Early Head Start and Head Start services at Gateway Community Action Partnership, said her organization has built a strong relationship with staff from the Head Start Region 2 office, who understand the specific needs of the communities Gateway serves in Atlantic, Cape May, Cumberland, Gloucester, Salem and Mercer counties. After Hurricane Sandy, the Head Start office was key to securing funding to build a new Gateway facility in Atlantic City, she said.

Isaac Dorsey, executive director of Head Start and Early Head Start at the Children's Home Society of New Jersey, said regional offices have played an important role in the success of Head Start programs he ran in New Jersey, Arizona and California. Currently, his Trenton-based program serves around 160 families for Early Head Start and 270 kids for Head Start.

As the program director, he meets monthly with a program specialist from the regional office to discuss challenges and needs. He said the office closure could have an "indirect effect on the quality of programs" due to the loss of staff who are knowledgeable about their region.

Dorsey, who was one of the first kids to enroll in Head Start in the 1960s, said he is a strong believer in the program. "I know it gave me and my mother an advantage," he said, since it allowed his mom to go to school while Dorsey and his sibling were attending Head Start programs.

Head Start in action

Gloria Andritsopoulos, family partnership manager for Head Start at Gateway, also credits Head Start for helping her get to where she is today. She started as a Head Start parent in 1998, and with the support of the program, earned an associate's degree and bachelor's degree and secured stable housing. Since enrolling her first child in Head Start, she has worked at Gateway as a classroom aide, family advocate, group teacher, coordinator, and now, family partnership manager.

Without federal funding, Gateway could not help families like hers, Andritsopoulos said.

Project 2025, the conservative playbook for President Donald Trump's second term, proposed the elimination of Head Start. Trump distanced himself from the playbook while campaigning but has since acted on many of its suggestions.

Dorsey said cuts to Head Start would be “devastating,” especially because students pandemic-related learning loss. The program also provides parents with hard and soft skills and gives them safe, reliable child care that allows them to work, he said.

Children’s Home Society staff anxiety has increased in recent months, causing some people to leave for other jobs they believe will be more secure, Dorsey said.
